HAD FENCES CUT IN 152 PLACES.

AN ACT OF REVENGE

W. Smith, commonly known as "Spokane" Smith is not the best liked man in the province, but that does not in any way excuse the low and covetous work of some miscreant who came along on Saturday night and cut half a mile of fencing on Smith's place. There were two wires on part and three wires on the rest of the half mile stretch and each wire was cut at every post. There were 152 places where each of the two or three wires were cut. Not content with this, whoever did this dirty work appears to have driven a bunch of horses and cattle into Smith's wheat. We hope the Police will speedily get hold of the low knave who did this dirty action.

TROUBLESOME COWBOYS

German settlers out east are having considerable trouble with the cowboys. The cowboys it appears have taken to driving cattle on to the German farmers crops, forgetting that Southern Alberta is no longer a happy hunting ground for them with their big bunches of cattle. We learn that a few days ago one of the cowboys, apparently out of revenge for being asked to keep out of a field of grain, drew a revolver and shot a horse belonging to one of the Germans. The German is looking for, and have a right to expect protection and a sufficient number of police officers should be detailed to look after this locality and round-up the cowboys who are carrying concealed weapons.

SPECIAL EXCURSION.

A special excursion train will leave Red Deer for the Alberta Provincial Exhibition at 8.30 a. m. on July 5th, 7th and 8th. The train will arrive in Calgary at 10.20 a. m. leave for the North again at 11.30 p. m. reaching Red Deer at 3.15 a. m.

The special train of the 5th will give everyone an excellent opportunity to be in Calgary in time to see the greatest historical pageant on Monday morning. The special train to be run on the 5th, 7th and 8th will leave Carstairs at 8.43, Crossfield at 9.11 and Airdrie at 9.35; returning they will leave Calgary at 11.30 p. m., arriving in Airdrie at 12.18, Crossfield 12.38 and Carstairs at 1.04 a. m. The return fares will be Carstairs $1.25, Crossfield 95c, Airdrie 65c and Beddington 30c.

Mr. Harbeck has just finished taking a series of pictures for the C. P. R. along the company's line from Vancouver to Calgary, having travelled from the coast to this city in a special train, so that he would be enabled to spend the necessary time along the line.

ADVENTISTS ARE BREAKING THE LAW.

THEY PLOW ALL DAY ON SUNDAY

It's up to the Attorney-General to take the first step.

The Mormons have been receiving a good deal of hostile criticism lately which it has been found is not well deserved. They have as a body tried to observe the law, unfortunately, however another religious sect which has invaded the province is giving open defiance to the country's law. Up till now no notice appears to have been taken of the matter, but it is high time the Attorney General and Police authorities got busy.

When the Adventists came to the country they were told of the existence of the Lord's Day Act and they declared that they were determined to observe the law. How are they doing so?

At 6 o'clock on Sunday morning their plow outfit gets to work and is at it until dark at night, and all other work goes ahead just the same as any other day—except Saturday, which day they observe. Their Catholic neighbors and others who have to pass them on their way to church are commencing to be disgusted with their proceedings and to complain of the example which is being set before their children.

It's up to the authorities! What will they do?

Love, Tomatoes and Finance.

By ESTELLE CLAYTON.

Copyright, 1928, by Associated Literary Press.

The big man of the town of Strongsville was Jacob Strong. First, his grandfather had founded the town; second, he had been a justice of the peace for some years; third, he had received almost votes enough once to send him to the legislature, and, lastly, he was worth about $30,000.

Mr. Strong felt his bigness and exacted respect accordingly. He did his best to make his son Horace and his daughter Maude feel their superiority over all other human beings in and around Strongsville. He succeeded admirably with his daughter, but the conduct of his son gave him no little anxiety.

One morning he said to the latter: "Horace, I am pained and embarrassed to learn that from the past you have been paying attention to the daughter of Scribner, the carpenter. You have been riding with her and you have frequently called at the house. What does it mean?"

"Miss Scribner is a nice young woman, sir," was the reply. "She is as well educated as our Maude and has as good manners."

"But, tut, tut, sir! Make no such comparisons. If you forget who and what I am, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Being the son of a man of position and wealth, with social prestige coming, you must look higher, sir, far higher."

It was true that Miss Nettie Scribner was the daughter of a carpenter, but as the favorite of her Aunt Hilda Bascomb, a rich old spinster, the girl had been sent to a secondary school and enjoyed exceptional opportunities. In all but wealth she was the peer of any girl in the county.

As a matter of fact the couple were engaged, but keeping it a secret. Horace had hoped that when the time came to announce the fact to his father it would be received at least in a reasonable way, but the conversation of the morning showed him the brothers ahead.

What Mr. Strong meant when he referred to more wealth and social prestige coming was the fact that he had organized the Strongsville Cannery company. The cannery building was already under way. It was a fertile farming country around the town with poor facilities for shipping fruits and vegetables, and he had conceived and entered on the idea of a tomato cannery.

He had investigated until he was certain that the profits would be large. He put in almost all the money and contrived things, and had convinced other stockholders there were not doing to Strongsville of a tomato cannery.

As president of a tomato cannery Jacob Strong felt himself to be a tangible object. He was right there and all there in his pomposity. He didn't propose to have anything but a cannery feel that as stockholders they need not have too much awe of him.

Of course the magnate's son informed the carpenter's daughter of the situation of affairs. Young Horace was determined to disobey his father at any cost, but, for the time being, Hilda arrived on her annual visit. She didn't exactly believe that all people were equal, but she bowed to none. If a carpenter and a blacksmith were honest and respectable men they were just as good in her eyes as magnates. The Scribners attempted to keep the secret from her, but she hadn't been in the house a day when she turned on her sister and said:

"Mary, there's something going on here, and I want to know all about it. I find Nettie looking plucked and sorrowful, and she hasn't eaten enough at three meals to keep a bird alive. No use trying to keep it from me. What's the matter?"

She was told, and when she had the particulars she set her jaw and nodded her head, which showed that she had made up her mind. Just what it was she didn't say that evening, but she did tell it next morning when she put on her rusty old bonnet and walked out. She said merely that she had a business matter to attend to.

Mr. Magnate Strong had a business office in the town, of course. Aunt Hilda made a straight course to him and plunged herself down a chair in front of the great man to say:

"Jacob Strong, my niece and your boy were attracted toward each other, and they have fallen in love and are engaged. I understand that you oppose the contemplated marriage."

"With all my soul, and if you are here to say anything in favor of it you may as well save your breath. I wonder that you had the impudence to appear at all."

"And what are your objections?" quietly asked Aunt Hilda as she got a strong hold of her protesting son.

"You have no right to ask!" he shouted at her. "But I will tell you at least."

one objection. No son of mine can mate with the daughter of a common carpenter."

"But Jacob Strong, how long did your father get a skinny living off a mighty poor thirty acres of ground in Michigan and what did he amount to as a man? How far back is it since you were running an old sawmill on Ten Mile creek in the same state? Mr. Scribner is a carpenter, but his pedigree is as good as yours."

"If you were a man I'd throw you out of the office!" shouted Jacob Strong.

"But, being I'm a woman, I'll walk out as fast as I can. Just called to let you know, Jacob, that I have arrived in town. Please keep a little track of me for the next two weeks, will you?"

The aunt reached home smiling and chuckling. She laid a hand on Nettie's head and said soothingly:

"I talked up to old Strong today. It was right that I should. But I haven't spoiled anything. Give me two weeks and I'll have him here begging you to marry his son. You tell the young man to remain quiet and do nothing until I have him in my power. This affair, which will be one of finance from now on, and if she makes a failure it will be for the first time. Now I've got to go home for a while and see a lawyer, and then I'll have some riding around the country to do. Oh, but won't I leave old Strong hung before I am through with him?"

In planning for the cannery Mr. Strong had called upon most of the farmers and had informed them, pompously that thereafter he would buy their tomatoes at the market price.

He had made no definite agreement with the growers, for he had determined to pay a mighty low price when the time came.

Miss Hilda Bascomb saw lawyers and had contrived to draw up a will. A boy to drive her, she covered most of the county the week after the interview with her son. The contract was signed right and left, and something was added for secrecy among the signers.

Meanwhile the tomato cannery was hurried along, and the fixtures arrived to be put in place. In her walks about the town the spinster met Mr. Strong several times face to face. Every time he scowled and she chuckled. There was anxiety at the Scribners to learn what was afoot, but the only explanation they could get was:

"I am simply doing a little financing to help Cupid and the tomato market along. When it's time to explode the torpedo you'll all hear the racket."

She had been in Strongsville almost a month when the racket was heard. The cannery was ready for business, and the farmers had been notified to deliver on a certain date. The date came, but there were no tomatoes.

A messenger was dispatched with a horse and buggy. He had been back about half an hour when Miss Bascomb entered Mr. Strong's office for the second time and slumped herself down in the same chair.

Mr. Strong was at the telephone. He was using vigorous language and dancing around.

"Well, and how's the tomato racket?" asked the caller as she glared at her and rung off.

"It is just you who have done this thing," he exclaimed, "to revenge yourself! You! You!"

"Yes, I have covered every tomato in the county. It wasn't for revenge, but to take Cupid a chance. How much will you take for your factory?"

"I won't sell to you. Your tomatoes are not on your lands."

"Oh, no, they won't, Jacob," chuckled Miss Hilda. "I can sell them at a very nice profit. But your factory can stand idle while I build one of my own. Better talk business, Jacob Strong. That son of yours is a nice young man, and I think a heap of my niece. It's a love match, and it would be a pity to see it broken off. Isn't there some way that I can turn these tomato contacts over to you and let your factory begin work? There's money in the cannery business, and I don't want to kill an industry."

Mr. Strong fought for an hour and then gave in and shook hands. By the time the contracts were assigned to her, she was smiling. By the time the woman in the rusty old bonnet was ready to go he was ready to remark blandly:

"Just so, Miss Bascomb; just so. Mr. and Mrs. Scribner are most worthy people, and if Horace is in love with their daughter I have no objections to a marriage. He is old enough to judge for himself, and it is not for me to interfere. Good day, ma'am, good day, and thank you ever so much for calling."

ANXIOUS MOMENTS FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

The hot weather months are an anxious time for all mothers, but particularly for young mothers. They are the most fatiguing time of the year for babies and young children, because of the great prevalence of stomach and bowel troubles. These come almost without warning and often before the mother realizes that there is anything wrong. Contrary to the belief of many, no other medicine can equal Baby's Own Tablets in prompt relief of stomach and stomach troubles, and an occasional dose given the well child will keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter and ensure good health to the child.

Therefore the Tablets should always be kept in the home, as they may be the means of saving a little life. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Unpoised Lives.
The life of the criminal is simply an unpoised life. If a person were perfectly poised wrongdoing would be as repugnant that it would be unthinkable.

It is the one-sided, the unpoised mind that goes wrong. It is just as normal for the balanced mind to choose the right, the good, as for the magnet to draw to itself whatever is kindred.

Just as the needle in the mariner's compass always points to the North star, no matter how thick the fog or how low the tempest, there is a needle within every human being which always points to the North star of rectitude, of right, of truth, no matter what storms of discord, of weakness or of crime may be raging in the individual mind. Nothing can prevent this little radiator from pointing to the right, no matter how far the individual may drift from it, how low he may sink in vicious living.—Success Magazine.

A New Part of Perik.

The teacher had been reading to her class of the industries of Russia. Among others mentioned was pig raising. The pig is used almost exclusively as an article of food, very little of his body being valued except his flesh and his bristles.

"The Russians have much to learn from the Americans in this respect," she continued. "In America all parts of the pig are used except his squeal."

At this point a pupil raised her hand and asked in all innocence:

"What part of the animal is the squeal?"—Lippincott's.

Showing His Mettle.

A man with a bronze complexion went up to a girl with a silvery voice and held the brass to attempt to kiss her. She resisted, and giving him a steely glance, called loudly for a copper.

"You are of the finest," quickly arrived on the scene and, with irony in his voice, made the man his prisoner. "Alas," cried the unfortunate, "my happiness is over"—Yale Record.

A Sure Sign.

A Wilmington woman recently reached the conclusion that the attachment of a police policeman for her cook must be investigated lest it prove disastrous to domestic discipline.

"Do you think he means business, Mary?" she asked.

"I think so, mum," said Mary. "He's begun to complain about my cooking," mum.—Harper's Weekly.

A Sportsman Draws the Line.

"A farmer was to take chances like any other business man," said the citizen who is interested in the uplift.

"Yes," answered Mr. Courtisell. "I have taken all kinds of chances. I answer most every circular anybody sends me. But I never yet had the nerve to depend on free distribution needs for my summer vegetables."—Washington Star.

Following Orders.

"Now," said the magistrate, "you must testify only to what you know; no hearsay evidence. Understand?"

"Yes, sir," replied the female witness.

"Your name is Mary Bright, I believe. Now, what's your age?"

"I won't tell you. I have only hearsay evidence on that point."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Eskimo Woman Magnate.

Probably one of the most remarkable women magnates in the world is Mary Connie, a full-blooded Eskimo whose possessions of earthly wealth are all within the Arctic circle, says the June Popular Mechanics. She is an absolute opposite to Hetty Green, the most noted woman magnate of the civilized world, in that she knows no civilization other than that of the Arctic circle, and cannot even read or write her name. The Hudson Bay Railway.

The following interesting paragraph is copied from an immigration pamphlet issued by a Minneapolis real estate company which claims to have offices at Calgary and Airdrie.

"The new short line to Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay will bring the Calgary district within about 800 miles of Fort Churchill where the products of the farm can be loaded into ocean vessels and transported without other charge to European markets. Or, in other words, the Hudson Bay route will shorten the distance between Alberta and the European markets about 800 miles, which means practically, the bringing of the Southern Alberta wheat fields to Montreal and our own eastern states. The not distant future will probably even see the exporting of a large part of the wheat raised in our own North-western States by way of Hudson Bay."

"The not distant future" is to see this come to pass, but an occasional correspondent writing to us from the Press Gallery at Ottawa has the following to say regarding the Hudson Bay Railway:—

"During the election last October the building of the Hudson Bay Railway was a matter of great urgency. The Laurier Government was in a great hurry to get at it. It managed to restrain its impetuosity until after election day; but it was a hard struggle to delay the work so long. Election day came, and the Laurier Government was returned to power. Somehow after that there seemed less hurry about the Hudson Bay Railway. The Session began and the Hudson Bay Railway was mentioned in the speech from the Throne; but there was less urgency about it. The Session dragged through its four months and not one word was said about the necessary Railway. The Session has ended: Still no Railway."

As there will not be another election for some years to come and as the Hudson Bay line was an election promise, fulfilment of which need not be looked for before the next election, the realty company whose immigration literature we have quoted had better cut out Fort Churchill line which really belongs to the dim and distant future, and substitute something about the already existing route to Vancouver which is open to handle grain quite as expeditiously.

The Provincial Exhibition.

The entries for exhibits at the Alberta Provincial Exhibition at Calgary from July 5th to 10th, closed on June 19th, and the showing made in every department is excellent. In all classes enumerated in the exhibition prize list from horses and cattle to the children's department, the entries will be the equal or surpass in number those made at the successful Dominion Exhibition last year.

Between 200 and 250 art treasures valued at from $100,000 to $125,000 will be included in the art loan exhibit at the Alberta Provincial Exhibition, Calgary, July 5th to 10th. Mr. E. O'Brien, of Montreal, who was successful in securing the greater part of this valuable collection from private art galleries of London, Paris and Canadian Cities, has notified Manager Richardson of the Exhibition Co. that the pictures were shipped from Montreal on June 12.

JOHANN'S COURTSHIP.

One of the Royal Romances of the Hapsburgs.

More than one royal romance has occurred in the family of the Hapsburgs. The best of all, perhaps, is that of the Archduke Johann, brother of the Emperor Francis I. One day he was traveling incognito when he arrived in a village where he was desired to take a coach for Vienna. He looked around to hire a carriage, for which, having been obtained, he sought a driver. At length a lad was brought to him.

"Your name?" queried the archduke. "Johann, sir," answered the lad. The archduke was quite. He had seen at a glance that this was no boy before him, but a girl disguised.

"What do you call yourself when you are at home helping your mother in the kitchen?" he asked, smiling. "Anna Floch," she answered. "And what is your name?"

"I suppose you will say that you are the emperor himself?" she laughed back at him. Then she drove his carriage into Vienna.

Here, behold, the people saluted, and she made inquiries, thus finding out the real facts. But she thought little more of the matter until a month later the archduke strode into her father's cottage just at the dinner hour and asked permission to talk the family gathering. The girl began apologetically, but the archduke laughed them aside and insisted on being called plain "Johann."

The visit was repeated again and again, and at last the villagers began to talk unkindly. Anna at last asked the archduke to come no more because of the gossip. That settled it. He asked her to marry him, and, despite the objections of the emperor, the two were married. Later the girl, once daughter of a jobmaster, was created baroness and countess and at last forgiven by the emperor.

QUENTIN METYS.

How Love Changed a Great Blacksmith into a Great Painter.

Love made Quentin Metys a painter. This great Fleming, whom both Antwerp and Louvain claim to have given birth, though the pain now rests with Louvain, was the son of an able blacksmith. Trained in his father's craft, the younger Quentin soon distinguished himself by his work in this base metal and among other matters turned out the wonderfully delicate ironwork that surmounted the well outside the Cathedral of Antwerp. Already an acknowledged master of his guild, it came about, writes Helen Zimmer in the Metropolitan Magazine, that the young artisan fell in love with the daughter of a rich Antwerp burgher.

When asked to consent to a marriage, however, the father would not hear of it, saying he could not let his daughter wed a blacksmith. Quentin next inquired if he would feel the same objection to a painter? The good burgher, who anticipated no change of craft on the questioner's part, replied that there, indeed, was a more refined profession. What was his surprise and perhaps secret dismay when some months later Quentin Metys reappeared and asked for the fulfillment of the old burgher's promise. He had, indeed, become a painter and one already held in high esteem. To whom he had given his services on "auto-portraits" that now hang in the Uffizi, at Florence.

Those acquainted with the secret knew that if they touch a little spring in this frame the panel opens like a door, and behind the sheet of Metys' own portrait is concealed that of his love and wife, a sweet Dutch face for whom doubtless he deemed it well worth his while to have played the part of the patriarch Jacob.

A Putting Tip From St. Andrews. A man on his first visit to St. Andrews was much impressed by the high standard of efficiency which he saw displayed on the greens by those with whom he played. He studied the actions of these heroes to see if he could discover any common feature in their methods. At last he saw light. He observed that they all held the left hand more under the club when putting than they did when driving.

From this he deduced a rule of conduct—"see the finger nails of the left hand when addressed to the ball." For the rest of his stay, and it may be for some time afterward, his own putting improved considerably.—London Post.

Patron—How can you tell whether a couple are married or not? Hotel Keeper—If he orders two whole portions, they are not; if he orders one portion for two, they are—Judge.

Her Sweet Answer.

Tom—And when you proposed she gave you a sweet answer? Dick—No, indeed. Tom—Ah, she said "Yes"? Dick—No, she said "Fudge."

One should not sell his principles for kindness or for compliments any more than he would sell his cash.

THE HORN FLY.

Some Remedies to Protect Cattle From This Annoying Pest.

The season is here when that great pest of the dairy cow, the horn fly, must be watched. Considerable anxiety is always evinced by stock owners concerning the annual appearance upon their cattle of enormous numbers of a small black fly which irritates the animals so much with its bite and disturbs them constantly that they fall off rapidly both in flesh and yield of milk.

This horn fly is a European pest which was first brought to the notice of the United States division of entomology in September, 1877, and was probably imported with cattle from Europe, where it has been known since 1830. The flies merely resort to the horn as a resting place from which they cannot easily be dislodged by the animal. They also congregate on the neck and on the base of the tail. While feeding the flies work their way down through the hairs so as to reach the skin of their victim, but they quickly take flight at the slightest disturbance. The bites seem to produce great irritation.

Preventive.—To quote from the United States entomologist, Messrs. Riley and Howard:

"Almost any greasy substance will keep the flies away for several days. A number of experiments were made in the field, with the result that train oil alone and train oil with a little sulphur or carbolic acid added will keep the flies away for from five to six days, while with a small proportion of carbolic acid it will have a healing effect upon sores which may have formed. Common axle grease will answer nearly as well, and this substance has been successfully and extensively used by a good stock dealer in Virginia. The oil has also been used to good advantage. The practice of smearing the horns with pine or coal tar simply repels them from their parts. Train oil will keep the flies away for several days.

A CONTINGENT ASSET.

The Court Didn't Appoint a Receiver to Administer It.

A woman was getting into great trouble, especially her ability to answer a question without giving any information, is well known, particularly to the members of the bar that have had occasion to cross words with her on the stand. A woman with a well developed sense of humor once foiled the persistent attempt of W. G. Chapin, late editor of the American Lawyer, to elicit information in supplementary proceedings. He tells the story of the failure himself.

"I had been admitted to the bar but a short time and was a fair specimen of the average theory student, practice wanting, law school graduate. How joyously were the commands of the managing counsel obeyed! Here was the looked for opportunity to demonstrate my ability in the noble art of searchingly examining a recalcitrant witness. A woman, real or person or not."

"Of the two, I fancy, however, that it was the lady who was more self possessed when the proceedings opened. She was a dressmaker and had been sued for debt by a dry goods firm. The examination dragged it out to the next day, and she was finally called to the witness stand. She was asked a question."

"Have you any property of any kind, real or personal, or any right or interest in property that you have failed to mention?"

"Perhaps it was my tone she disliked. At any rate, her eyes snapped. 'Well, I've got what perhaps you wouldn't call an interest, but it's almost as good. It's an expectation. Must I answer?'"

"If you please," I was encouraged. "Well, you see, it's this way. I've got a husband and both of 'em have married lately. Now, neither one of them begins to be as good looking as I am."

"Yes," she had me puzzled. "Well, I really don't see why I shouldn't have the same show."

"It is needless to say that there was no record appointed to administer this 'asset.'—Chicago Record-Herald.

A CONFIDING CONSTABLE.

The Way He Helped the Housemaid Repel the Burglars.

A good story is told at the expense of a constable in Great England, says a writer in the London Telegraph. Not long ago a young and pretty housemaid arrived at the big house of the neighborhood, and it was observed that our friend's best often took him in that direction. At first she seemed to resent his advances, but suddenly she changed her mind and the course of true love appeared to run smooth—for a time.

One night he called rather late than usual. It was dark, and his fair one greeted him somewhat coolly, he thought.

His thoughts, however, disappeared when she suddenly declared that she would take him into her confidence. She had overheard the particulars of the plot to break into the house and steal the plate.

"Now, Jim," she said, "here's a chance for promotion. The burglar knows where the plate is kept, so we've shifted it. What I want you to do is to get into the plate cupboard and wait till they come and open the door."

Jim jumped at the chance and half an hour later was concealed in the cupboard. As the door came, as expected, and promptly got to work. The constable chuckled to himself as he heard the muffled whirr of a tool on the outside of the cupboard door, and he grasped his staff and waited.

After some minutes' waiting he resolved to take a cautious peep. But the door was fast, securely screwed on the outside by the burglar.

When Jim eventually rose the house and was released from his place on the burglar and plate, together with the pretty housemaid (a confederate), had disappeared. Moreover, the constable himself took a good deal of explaining away.

Awkward, but No Chump. Once there was a pretty woman who came upon a huge ostrich to the desert.

"Foolish bird," said the pretty woman. "You cover your head with sand and think you are out of sight."

The huge ostrich laughed. "My dear madam," he chuckled, "there is nothing foolish about that. Don't you cover your head with a hat decorated with my feathers and think you are 'out of sight'?"

Moral.—The ostrich is an awkward bird and eats horseshoes, but he can hit back in other ways than with his big feet.—Chicago News.

The Mean Thing! Mrs. Oldham—Why are you so down on that lively Mr. Bachelor? Mrs. Youngling—Oh, he snubbed our precious Alfred. He said he thought baby might some day become vice president.—Exchange.

In order to love mankind we must not expect too much of them.—Herald.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader. Duties—Six months' residence upon cultivation of the land in each of three years, or 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.
